

Mark Guarino, Daily Herald Chicago-

"HOUSE FIRE: The shimmery acoustic bounce of Twelfth House may transmit feel-good vibes, but don't let that fool you. The cautious, edgy wordplay of guitarist and singer Sally Maish is poetic, but more on the Robert Frost side. Like the title of her song 'Passive' Maish effectively touches on being stuck and what it takes to fly free. The rest of the Twelfth House trio...temper the songs with the right textures. Crisp playing, mid-song rhythm changes and harmonies gives Twelfth House's debut...a truthful, muscular and rich sound."
